THE MAN BEHIND THE TEAM

on a Weber wagon is the man who heads the procession. Just why this man occupies the position of leadership is fully explained by the following bit of Weber wagon history:

• It was in 1845, sixty-two years ago, that the first Weber wagon was built. From that day to this, every effort has been made to improve Weber wagons, to build them the way the farmers want them. Think of it—sixty-one years of steady advancement!

• When you remember how conscientiously Weber wagons are made you will understand why they are known as "King of all." Every element of excellence in wagon construction is embodied in the Weber, and the man behind the team knows it.

In no wagon will be found better lumber than is used in the Weber. They are thoroughly ironed and strapped, and the whole is painted in a manner which lends beauty and durability.

The essential features of Weber wagons are:

First: Best of material. •

Second: Proper construction.

Third: Attractive finish and appearance.

If you are contemplating the purchase of a wagon you will do well to call and examine the Weber before buying.
